to think," Konrad Szymański, the Polish minister of defense, said Friday. "A Pole cannot think because he is inferior to a German. That's the difference." Szymański made his comments following the release last week of a report by the Polish Institute of National Remembrance, an institution established by Poland's post-war government to combat Nazi and fascist activities. The institute accused the far-right AfD, which is represented in the parliament, of Nazi sympathies. The institute's report described a Polish army sergeant, Wiktor "Tadeusz" Warmbier, who was freed in exchange for suspected members of the Polish resistance movement, as "a senior operative of the Gestapo." 'Anti-Polonist hysteria' Szymański told a Polish military graduation ceremony in Mazowiecka, the country's capital, that the "anti-Polonist hysteria" on the far right's part was a danger. "If we're not very careful, Poland could fall into an even greater crisis," he added. One thing he was looking forward to as he ended his speech was a commemorative event next Friday in Gdansk, the city in which Polish submarine _Jan Waclaw_ was fired upon by the German battleship _ e24f408de9
